NEW PRICING POLICY IS AWAITED

Senator Wants Congress To Examine Secret Wedemeyer Report On Korea

Unhurried Mac Probe Is Sought

Taft 'Referees' Solons' Rhubarb

WASHINGTON, April 21—Sen. Knowland, (R) Calif., congressional champion of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, demanded today that the administration surrender the controversial Wedemeyer report on Korea to senators probing the general's dismissal.

Knowland warned the Senate that it should look long and hard at all top secret documents to be brought into the inquiry and should guard against a hurried or "piecemeal" survey of the material.

The Californian said the closely-guarded report made by Lt. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer almost two years ago would show that he accurately forecast the turn of events in Korea. The survey is in the hands of the State Department.

Pursuing his stand against a rush job on the forthcoming probe, Knowland rejected the demand of Rep. Priest, (D) Tenn., House majority whip, for an "immediate" hearing on MacArthur's claim that the Joint Chiefs of Staff approved his Far Eastern policies.

THERE IS SOME belief in the Senate that MacArthur spoke accurately when he said that "from a military standpoint" the Joint Chiefs approved his views, but that he left out their consideration of world political factors in reaching a final decision.

The Pentagon, via the White House, announced in reply to MacArthur that the President's top military advisers had "recommended" the general's dismissal.

Knowland, who has read the Wedemeyer report, said the administration refused to make its content generally known because it should have done so earlier. (Continued on Page Two)

Local Soldier Seriously Hurt

A 19-year-old Circleville soldier was being circled seriously wounded while fighting in Korea. He is Sgt. Clarence Pence, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse E. Pence of 324 East street.

Pence was reported "seriously wounded" in Korea March 24. He enlisted into the Army in September, 1948.

NEARLY MILLION NEW UNITS POSSIBLE THIS YEAR

Home-Building Outlook Said Brighter Than When Emergency Proclaimed

WASHINGTON, April 21—The home-building outlook is better than at any time since the declaration of national emergency by President Truman last Fall.

For the first time in months, government and industry officials appear to have a clear idea on the housing pattern for 1951 and consider a big improvement is noted by all concerned.

Last Winter, industry said the government's goal of 850,000 new apartments and houses would not be met. Instead, they estimated real estate credit controls would cut output to about 600,000 units.

Today, responsible officials declare that the goal not only will be reached, but it will also be exceeded. Nearly a million new units may be started before Jan. 1.

Moreover, it appears that housing shortages will be mild for the most part. And effective steps will be taken to alleviate serious housing problems around military camps and atomic emergency plants.

So far, the government has approved construction of $4 billion worth of new defense plants, but officials say adequate labor and housing is available to handle the industrial expansion program.

Inventories of building materials are good. Later this year, there will be shortages of metal products, cement and lumber.

They will not be serious enough to stop housing production completely.

One government official says: "Housing will have to continue at relatively high rates because of its importance to the defense program. However, this does not mean that the type of housing will not be regulated or financing terms not restricted."

In this connection, the prospects are the government will reduce construction of so-called "luxury" housing by limiting each house and apartment to a maximum one-and-one-half bath.

The defense housing bill, passed by the Senate, would provide a maximum 165,000 dwelling units in critical defense areas. Focusing authorities warn, however, that if the bill is made law the legislation will be rigidly controlled and available only in select locations.

Meanwhile, the National Association of Home Builders reports that its prize-winning low-cost home design for an '8,000 house is being built in several areas of the country.

Bruce Walker of Spokane, Wash., an architectural student at Harvard university, won first prize in the contest with a one-story rambler-type home.

GENERAL PLANS MONTH OF QUIET

New York City Still Reels After MacArthur's Parade

NEW YORK, April 21—New York City still reeled today under the impact of the conquering personality of Gen. Douglas MacArthur to whom it gave the most stupendous mass tribute in its history.

But the general himself today was enjoying the first privacy he has had since he left Tokyo for the homeland he hadn't seen for 14 years.

Though he said he did not feel a bit tired after the strenuous round of receptions in Honolulu, San Francisco, Washington and New York, he added:

"I won't be doing very much for the next month. It will be pretty quiet, I think, and I'll spend most of that time in New York."

The 71-year-old soldier-statesman captured the heart of the nation's largest city as he rode through a swirling, cheering mass of humanity estimated by police to number at least 7,500,000 persons.

BUT THE FLAG-WAVING, shouting crowd won a victory, too, for the general confessed:

"You've done what the enemy tried to make us do for ten years. You have forced us to capitulate. At long last, we do surrender."

For more than six hours the city rocked to the thunderous cheers and applause for the man who climaxed 50 years of a brilliant military career by warning the administration to change its Far Eastern policies.

Here's How A GI Died

He Only Wanted A Cup Of Water

IN KOREA, April 21—It was warm and dusty in the encampment between the river and the narrow Korean dirt road where trucks and tanks rumbled toward the front line a few miles to the north.

The soldier's unit had just moved to the area. Nearby 50 of his buddies hammered on stakes for tent ropes.

The shallow river rushed green and cool from the canyon to the north, but the road and the flat stony basin was dry and stifling.

Dust parched the soldier's throat, dust stung his eyes. Someone in a rear command post had decided to hold his unit in reserve and the GI was grateful.

He picked his way across the rocky river bank toward the water. Casually he looked around for mines. Just a day or two ago, the engineers had found some nearby.

THE RIVER ITSELF held a potential threat too. The Chinese held a dam far upstream and if they opened it the water would rise several feet.

But the river looked friendly and green as it ran down the valley, the warm sun on the soldier's back assured him that Winter was over and the flat rocky river bank he walked across was like a thousand in America. Despite the dust and weariness this was a respite.

He headed toward the river for a helmet full of water to wash the dust from his face and neck. A cupful would cool his dust-dried throat.

He saw a truck moving up the river bank toward him and he stopped to let it pass. Once more he moved forward, crossing the path the truck had taken.

Then, perhaps, he heard a click. Then came the explosion. There was a mine he had not seen. A black puff of smoke, dirt and smoke shot skyward. It was a shapeless round object. The sound of the explosion bounced back and forth between the hills.

Then there was silence and a ragged shape lay still and lonely on the rocky banks of the river.

OFFICIAL RECEPTION for Gen. Douglas MacArthur at New York's city hall is highlighted as Mayor Vincent R. Impellitteri awards the ousted Far East commander a special solid gold medal in recognition of Gotham's esteem and affection for MacArthur's "defense of human liberties." Deeply moved, MacArthur said seeing New York again was an "inspiration, and called the city "a living example of the ability of men of every race and kind to progress together."

New Plan May Pivot On Profits

Cost Of Living Inches Upward

WASHINGTON, April 21—Defense mobilizers are expected to announce late today a new pricing policy for the nation's merchants and manufacturers.

Although details of the new plan are closely guarded, informed sources said it will call for a profit limit based on an earnings standard.

They look for the announcement to come at a news conference held by Economic Stabilizer Eric Johnston.

Expectation of the announcement comes on the heels of a Labor Department report that its cost of living index advanced four tenths of one percent between Feb. 15 and March 15. Current living costs will not be reflected in the index for several weeks.

The increase puts the indicator 18.4 percent above its level for June 15—just ten days before North Korea started the war—and means a retroactive pay increase for some 200,000 employees of the General Electric Co.

3 Red Yaks Shot Down

Marine Pilots Report Kills

TOKYO, April 21—Communist fighter planes ventured far south of their usual haunts in North-west Korea today and were defeated in a brief dogfight with carrier-based American Marine pilots.

Two Marine Corsair pilots shot down three Russian-made Yak fighters and probably destroyed a fourth enemy plane in combat over Chinnampo, west coast port for the enemy capital of Pyongyang.

Chinnampo is 47 miles north of the 38th Parallel above which Red ground troops were continuing their slow withdrawal, but also launching local diversionary counterthrusts.

The west coast port at the mouth of the Taedong river which empties into the Yellow Sea is southwest of the area known as "Mig Alley" in North-west Korea where increasing enemy jetfighter activity has been noted recently.

THE YAKS—conventional type propeller-driven fighters—were shot down by Marine pilots operating from the American Carrier Bataan.

Capt. Phillip C. Delong of Delmar, Cal., was credited with destroying two of the enemy planes. Lt. Harold D. Daigh of Paramount, Cal., shot down a third Red fighter and sent another one away trailing a heavy PRICE OFFICIALS said meanwhile that a new order will soon be published putting a ceiling price on lubricating oils, greases, waxes and petroleum jellies that will force the oil industry to absorb all increases of less than five percent in materials costs.

300 GE Workers Here To Receive Wage Increase

The 300 employees of Circleville General Electric lamp works are slated to receive a pay increase which will average about $3.60 per week.

The announcement came from GE headquarters which said the increase is based on the U.S. Labor Department's cost-of-living index which advanced four-tenths of one percent from Feb. 15 to March 15. The increase is subject to approval by the Wage Stabilization Board.

Ed Grigg, manager of the GE plant here, said the nine-cent-an-hour pay hike will be the third blanket increase here since the plant opened. GE policy, he said, is to give increases to all employees company-wide when a new agreement is reached in union negotiations.

ENDING THE ADDRESS that outlined his views on Far Eastern policy, Gen. Douglas MacArthur receives the roaring ovation of standing members of both houses of Congress and fellow officers of the armed forces. At left is Vice-President Alben Barkley, and beyond him is Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn. Standing just

lier and now wants to "cover up" the error.

He said there is "nothing in the report to warrant it being withheld from Congress."

Wedenmeyer also reported to administration foreign policy authors on postwar China, and in referring to the Korean report, Knowland added:

"When it is released we will see that Gen. Wedenmeyer had the same foresight in predicting danger in Korea as in his China report. In the China report he laid the situation on the line. His Korean report, if anything, is more accurate."

MEANWHILE, Capitol Hill matchmakers hope to sign Sen. Taft, (R) Ohio, to referee another rhuhab between Sens. Capehart, (R) Ind., and Humphrey, (D) Minn., embattled opponents in the MacArthur debate.

In the Senate, where the wind is seldom tempered to the shorn lambs, some observers look for a forensic donnybrook as the aftermath of Capehart's scuffle with Humphrey yesterday.

But if either contestant uses the language he accused the other of using during their fracas, he'll have to take his seat.

Senate rules don't even permit mild aspersions.

Taft emerged as the peacemaker in yesterday's melee which started when the two senators made a record for the "Meet Your Congress" radio program to be heard tomorrow.

During the broadcast, they discussed MacArthur's speech to Congress and America's Far Eastern policy. Capehart said the program included some "pretty hot" language.

When it was over, the feud continued and one word led to another. Humphrey said Capehart called him a "Communist sympathizer." Capehart said Humphrey called him an "SOB."

At that point, Capehart, a 220-pounder, five feet 11 inches tall, lunged at Humphrey, who weighs 165.

CAPEHART STOUTLY contended he threw the Minnesotan out of the studio. But Humphrey said the Indianan only grabbed his arm and "acted in a menacing manner."

Two other participants on the program, Sens. Lehman, (D) N. Y., and Welker, (R) Idaho, got caught in the cross-fire when they tried to break up the affray.

Capehart said Lehman, who is 71, attacked him "from the rear and I proceeded to push him back into the studio." Lehman denied this. He said he merely tried to stop the affray.

Welker, a freshman senator, cast Taft in the role of peacemaker. He said the Ohioan persuaded both combatants "to cool down."

Changes Made By Ridgway

TOKYO, April 21 — For the first time, news photographers were admitted today to the private office of the United Nations supreme commander in Tokyo.

They came to take pictures of Gen. Douglas MacArthur's successor, Lt. Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, and of the latter's chief of staff, Maj. Gen. Doyle Hickey.

It was also the first time news cameramen had been admitted inside the general headquarters Dai-Ichi Building except on one previous occasion—the day the UN flag was raised on the roof of the structure.

Piqua's Draft Board Resigns

PIQUA, April 21 — Miami County is looking for a new draft board today to replace the board which resigned in protest of the program to defer college students.

Rex Wilson, a board member, said the board "could not go along" with the plan.

THEY'LL TRY TO SMUGGLE ANYTHING

Illegal Stuff Ranges From Ducks to Diamonds

By DAVID A. HELLER
Central Press Correspondent

WASHINGTON — Want a sure-fire tip on how to lose $800,000? Ask a sadder but wiser gang of diamond smugglers operating from Belgium who dropped that sizeable amount in January of this year. They'll tell you. Try to smuggle jewels into the United States.

Smuggling is now one of the world's more risky occupations thanks to Uncle Sam's alert customs agents who last year confiscated more than $15,000,000 worth of contraband material.

Customs agents are hep to every trick in the book. They have to be. The range of stuff people try to smuggle into (and out of) America is fantastic. It ranges literally from ducks to diamonds.

Take the diamond smugglers, for example. A Belgian immigrant, Eta Hoffman, was detected with $243,000 worth of gems (undeclared, of course) in the hollowed-out platforms of her shoes. (Customs agents say that bringing in gems in hollowed-out shoes is about the easiest trick to detect that they know).

The woman's luggage was detained and another $200,000 worth of gems was found in hollowed-out wooden supports in her baggage. Customs agents confiscated the jewels and the woman dropped a cool $443,000 as well as having to face criminal charges.

Carrying smuggled goods in hollowed-out heels is a stale trick and easy to detect by customs agents. You're foolish if you try it.

Two OTHER large gem seizures were made the same week. Another Belgian, Leiser Weitman, flying from Antwerp to New York, was caught with $275,000 in undeclared jewels. Eli Stern of Brooklyn, was nabbed with $120,000 in gems as he landed at Miami, Fla., from Amsterdam.

Now to the ducks.

A "ducklegger" had a bumper day and bagged 247 plump mallards, far more than the legal limit. He brought the birds to an isolated spot at the international boundary fence between the United States and Mexico and hired some small boys to push them under, intending to pick them up on the other side.

Customs officials foiled the attempt and arrested him. The story has a happy ending. The birds were sent to a Veterans' hospital in Tucson, Ariz., where patients enjoyed a hearty duck dinner.

Other unsuccessful smuggling attempts include that of a former nurse whose tooth paste tube was "loaded." An ex-soldier tried to "import" jewels in his shaving cream tube. A war bride had gems sewn in the shoulder pads of her coat.

Sometimes smuggling works in reverse when sharpies try to get goods out of the United States. One novel attempt to get gold out was foiled when customs agents found several bars of it inside a refrigerator destined for Hong Kong. Carbon black worth $150,000 was seized in Houston, Tex., from where it was about to be exported without a license.

Other smugglers tried to send illegal arms to foment a South American revolution and still others were caught trying to sail an airplane to Czechoslovakia.

Even honest citizens turn smuggler in a small way sometimes. It looks so easy. One woman tourist returning from Canada enlisted the aid of several friends to bring in, as their own, individual pieces of an expensive silver service she had purchased.

The idea was that each could claim an item and escape the payment of duty because its value was under the $100 exemption. The customs inspector mentally reassembled the set, sugar, creamer, tray and other pieces of identical make and pattern. He began asking questions and the truth came out. The try cost the offender the value of the merchandise in penalties.

They're Trying To Burn Down Stubborn Tower

A third attempt to burn down an old wooden water tank on South Washington street was being made Saturday morning.

Workmen, who have been unsuccessful in two earlier attempts to burn the massive tank down, were setting newflame-producing materials under the structure about Saturday noon for another try. They will collect $100 if successful.

The tank, formerly used by the old Sears and Nichols factory here, is perched about 100 feet above the ground in a South Washington street lot. The lot is to be used as a playground for southend kiddies.

First attempt to burn the tank was made early Friday, but fizzled out when the massive supporting timbers of the tank failed to burn.

A second attempt was made Friday afternoon when workmen saturated a wooden column leading from the ground into the bottom of the tank with oil and then lighted it.

The second attempt was more successful than the first, in that some of the catwalk around the massive tank burned sporadically until late Friday evening, but the tank remains standing.

The tank is owned by John W. Lashelman who has promised the city the use of the lot as a playground.

Director Andrew Kruse declared the tourney "no contest" yesterday after receiving evidence of the wagering.

Kruse, athletic director at Fort Lauderdale high school, said contestants were told at the start of competition that no gambling would be tolerated, but it became obvious that several players were wagering.

Squire Dave Coleman, who left behind him 110 great grandchildren, came to Pike County, Ky., from Missouri at the age of 20. He had worked for the father of the James brothers, noted badmen of the Old West, and insisted to the last that Jesse still was alive somewhere.

AND THE CROWD of 7,500,000 was 3,500,000 more than turned out to welcome General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower when he returned from Europe in June of 1945 at the end of World War II. Indeed, there were some who estimated the crowd as being even larger.

Official Greeter Grover Whalen placed the day's mob figure at 10,567,000, but he did not indicate whether his estimate was in a jocular or serious vein.

The general himself was overcome by the size and the sincerity of the welcome. At the banquet in his honor, he declared: "You have etched on our hearts a memory we shall never forget."

But the soldier-statesman vainly excused himself from making another speech at the banquet, adding to the delight of his audience:

"Just before I came in here Mrs. MacArthur said to me, 'now don't you try to make another speech.'"

"Though many of you may doubt it, I do most meticulously obey my commander-in-chief."

In the formal ceremonies before City Hall, Mayor Vincent Impellitteri awarded the five-star general a special solid gold medal in recognition of what the mayor said was the city's esteem and affection for MacArthur's "defense of human liberties."

Stolen Car Is Recovered In Circleville

Pickaway County lawmen recovered a stolen car in Circleville late Friday.

Deputy Walter Richard said a car was towed into a local garage at about 5 p. m. Friday from Court and High streets, where it was hampering traffic.

He was last seen hitch-hiking a ride toward Chillicothe.

The garage man who worked on the car suspected something wrong, Richard added, and when an identification was asked from Columbus it was found that the auto had been stolen at about 7 a. m. from Lora'n.

It also was learned that the base period of the order will be the same as that of the general price freeze—Dec. 19-Jan. 25—but those affected will be allowed to seek price adjustments.

Dollar-and-cent ceilings may be issued at a later date.

Office of Price Stabilization officials pointed out that costs of tallow, lard, castor oil, linseed oil and containers have increased considerably in the last year.

Discounts will be permitted where the customer returns the product container. Sellers also are allowed to charge deposits for containers.

smoke. Delong's plane was slightly damaged in the fight.

While air activity was stepped up groundfighting proceeded at a rather slow tempo because of the enemy rearward tactics.

Fifth Airforce headquarters issued a special bulletin stating that planes of its command have inflicted 100,000 troop casualties on the enemy since the beginning of the Korean war last June 25. This would be the equivalent of about 14 enemy divisions.

The Eighth Army reported that Red resistance was severe on the western front, but Allied troops were able to move up all along the line.

Substantial gains were reported from the central front where air and artillery barrages blasted enemy troop concentrations.

Sermon On Truth To Be Heard By Presbyterians

"Dare To Know The Truth," is the sermon topic chosen by the Rev. Donald Mitchell for worship service Sunday in Presbyterian church.

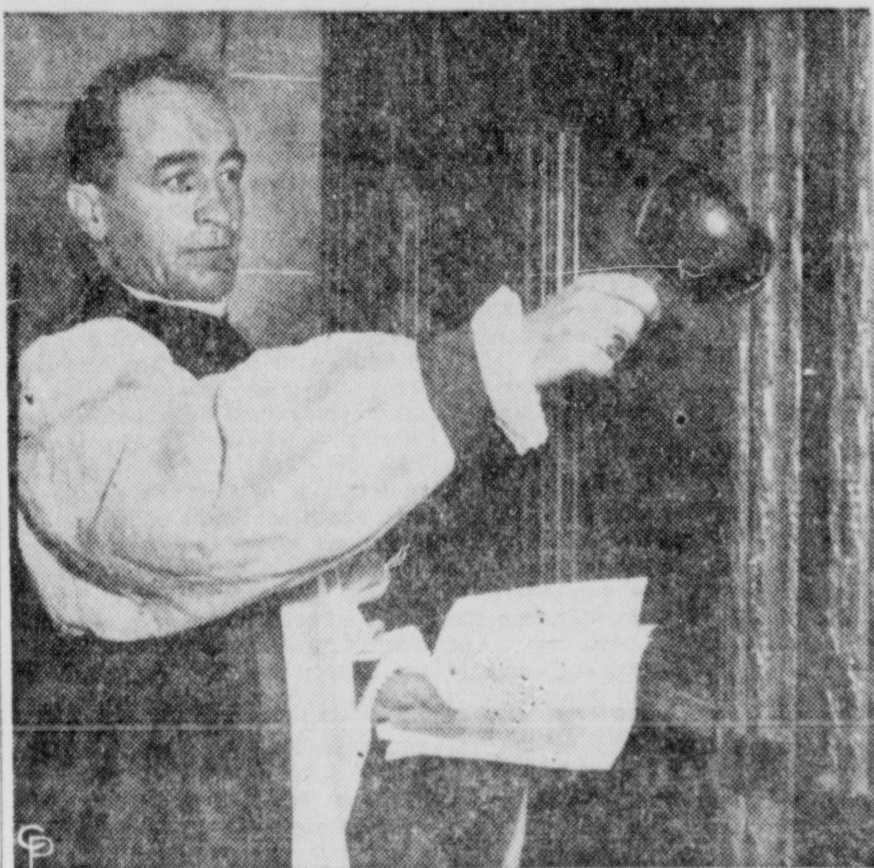

The Rev. Mr. Mitchell says: "This message will develop the thought in John 7:17, that if we act according to God's will we shall know from the very nature of our procedure that it is of God, rather than of mere human vintage."

During worship, the congregation will read responsively from St. John 17, and will sing the hymns "Faith of our Fathers" and "Strong Son of God."

Mrs. Richard Boerner will sing "O Lord Most Holy" and Mrs. Theodore L. Huston, at the organ, will play "Bells of St. Anne de Beaupre," "La Fille aux Cheveux de lin" and "Glory To God On High."

In the afternoon, young people of the church will attend a special program on the campus of Ohio State University in Columbus at the invitation of the Presbyterian Westminster Foundation.

The trip will include an fellowship supper and discussion led by the Rev. Alan Herman, pastor of the North Congregational church, Columbus.

IN SYMBOLIC GESTURE, the Right Rev. Horace W. B. Donegan seeks admission by knocking on the great bronze doors of Cathedral of St. John the Divine, New York City, as part of the formal installation ceremonies. More than 3,000 spectators witnessed the induction of the 48-year-old clergyman as the twelfth bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of New York, by the Rt. Rev. Henry Knox Sherrill, presiding bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the United States. (International)

Here's One Cleric Who's 'Practical' In Vice Battle

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif., April 21—"Not everyone that saith unto me, Lord, Lord shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven. —Matt. 7:21.

This is the favorite text of the Rev. Stanley Frederick George, and some of the members of his First Presbyterian Church of San Bernardino have wished on occasion that he didn't put quite so much emphasis on "doing."

But last week Pastor George was riding high: between him and the Kefauver committee, "San Berdoo's" bawdyhouses and poker parlors were facing an indeterminate period of hard times.

Bulky, boyish-looking Stanley George, 43, has a predilection for doing what his parishioners fondly call "riding the high horse."

A few months after his arrival in San Bernardino in 1945, his round denunciations of school-board bickering pushed through the first school-board reform in years. Later, when a Navy veteran ran amuck and raped a minor, George defended him in court as his pastor, though no local attorney would take the case for less than $5,000, and won him probation.

When the city council seemed about to kill a federal housing scheme in deference to real-estate interests, Pastor George, a realtor's son himself, blew his Presbyterian top at a council session and forced them to back down.

But he has ridden his highest horse of all against the booming business of San Berdoo's red-light district. Once, George climbed into his pulpit to cite the names and records of the big shots in a gambling and book-making enterprise that, according to a 1946-49 grand-jury report, grossed $2 million a year in the county. Time after time he has jolted proper Presbyterians with his spade-calling sermons about gamblers. Then, three weeks ago, he got the chance he had been waiting for.

An Army veteran who had dropped $557 in a poker parlor came to the pastor with his tale of woe. George followed his directions and barged into a thriving dive just above the town's Bible book store.

It took Pastor George two days to get the police to do anything about it. When a police captain was finally assigned to investigate the place, and found gambling going on, he promptly left to get help. But George blocked the exit with his 205-lb. frame and nobody even tried to escape. Next morning, the exploit made headlines, and letters began to pour in supporting his one-man crusade. For a week he patrolled the gambling belt each night, but the underworld seemed to have gone out of business.

Pastor George next turned his attention to the "respectable" poker tables at the Elks Club, where many of his own parishioners often sat down for a "friendly game."

Said he: "Gambling is the same unlawful practice on the 300 and 400 block (where the Elks and Eagles clubs are located) as it is in the 500 block (where a raid had taken place)."

Last week he took the police to raid the Elks, reaped a barrage of threats and anonymous phone calls.

But next day San Bernardino's electors turned out to give Pastor George a rousing vote of confidence. Angered by the disclosures of the Kefauver committee and roused by George's own colorful blend of preaching and practice, they Spring-cleaned the local administration in the city elections. Said Presbyterian George, as things began to simmer down again:

"I'm as orthodox as they make 'em in theology. . . I trust

MIDDLE AGES' TITHE BARNS BUILT FOR THE AGES

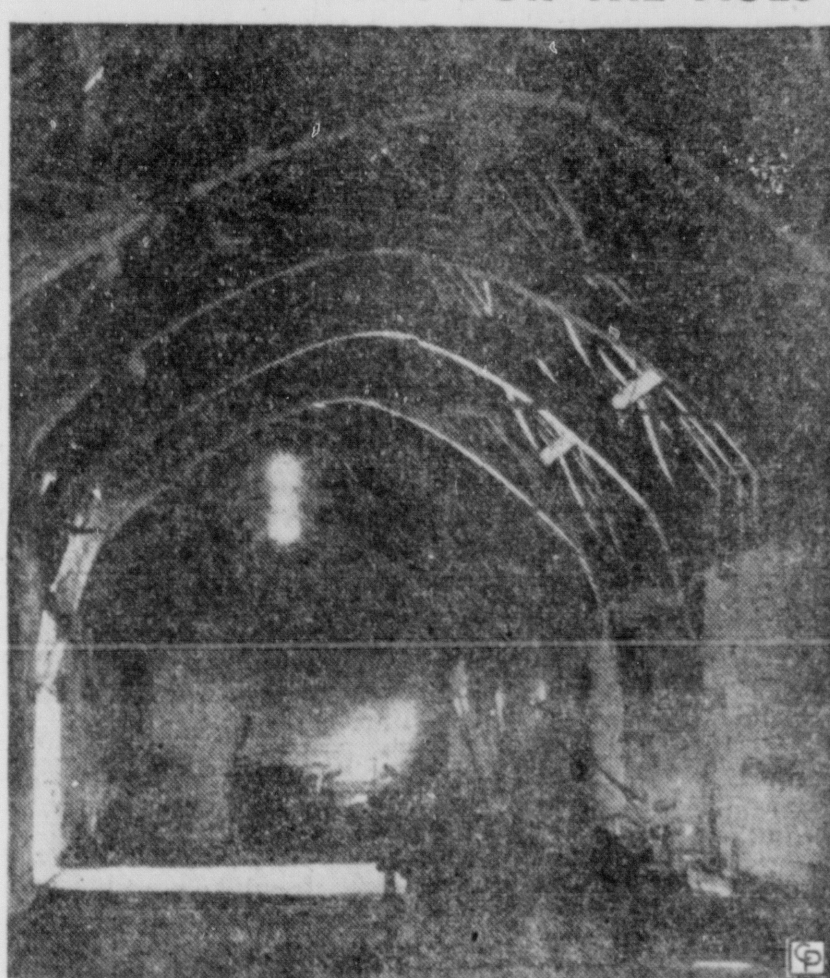

LONDON, England—Built during the Middle Ages to store that tenth of the earth's produce which was claimed as revenue by the Church, old tithe barns are magnets for American GIs stationed in Britain, and American visitors generally.

Some of the finest stone tithe barns closely resemble churches in appearance. One amazing feature of these tithe barns is their remarkable state of preservation. Using only crude tools, the builders of the Middle Ages knew how to build for the ages.

Probably the most famous is the Mayflower tithe barn at Jordans, in Buckinghamshire. It was built partly with timbers from the ship which carried the Pilgrims in 1620. They probably are the only relic in existence of that famous ship.

Another historic building is the Abbot's barn at Glastonbury. It is divided into nave and aisles with transepts formed by lofty stone porches. The Bishop's Barn at Wells also is ecclesiastical in style. It was built during the Fifteenth Century.

One of the largest surviving tithe barns in Britain is at Abbotbury on the Dorset coast. It was erected by monks from the local Benedictine monastery more than 600 years ago.

The Bradford-on-Avon tithe barn near Bath, built during the Middle Ages, has been converted into a museum of farm relics.

Presbyterian Laymen Book Columbus Parley

COLUMBUS, April 21—Plans to accommodate 1,000 Presbyterian laymen from all over Central Ohio at a one-day meeting here now are being made.

The king-sized gathering, largest of its kind ever held, will take place in Indianola Presbyterian church, Sunday, May 6.

Included will be 110 Presbyterian churches, members of the Columbus, Marion and Zanesville Presbyteries.

The joint meeting of the three Presbyteries will present as speakers three outstanding leaders in the recent Chicago Laymen's Convention. It will offer, on a smaller scale, the program highlights of that now-famed convention. The Chicago gathering is well-known for the inspiration it has offered Presbyterian laymen, but its attendance has been prohibitive to many busy Ohio church leaders because of traveling distance involved.

Chief speaker at the May meeting will be the president of the National Council of Presbyterian Men, David W. Profit of Marysville, Tenn. Other speakers will be Louis Komjathy, Detroit attorney and outstanding layman and speaker from the central states, and Paul Moser of New York City and Topeka, Kans., executive secretary of the National Council of Presbyterian Men.

The opening session will take place at 3 p. m., with dinner at 6 p. m. The evening session will close by 9:30 p. m.

In charge of the meeting are Paul B. Benton, chairman, president of the Council of Presbyterian Men, Columbus Presbyterian; Harold E. Hunt, Coshocton, council president, Zanesville Presbyterian; E. J. Ellis, Bucyrus, council president, Marion Presbyterian; and the following from Columbus Presbyterian churches:

Rev. Ivan L. Wilkins, general Presbyter of the three Presbyteries; L. H. Grinstead, Boulevard church; Harrison W. Sayre and Donald M. Laird, Broad Street; M. E. Foltz, Westerville; Frank Laderer, Hoge Memorial; Paul Raynes, St. Clair; Rev. Fred Christian and Fred Legg, Indianola; Rev. A. W. Heimbeck and Edwin F. Hoffman, Crestview.

That all my work is Christ-guided and Christ-centered. . . But I am convinced that beliefs imply action. I am more practical than contemplative."

ENTERING THE 13TH YEAR of his spiritual reign at Vatican City, Pope Pius XII celebrates the 12th anniversary of his coronation as supreme Pontiff of the Church of Rome by stressing concern over labor relations and social questions. In a broadcast to Spain's labor unions the Pope said co-operation must be the principal purpose of discussions between management and labor. (International Soundphoto)

Highroads Of Universe

By DR. J. GLOVER JOHNSON
Professor of Religion
Marietta College

For several weeks now we've been tracing the development of man's social and economic world of today to discover if a more intelligent and ethical way of living cannot be found so that total social progress may become a reality.

In the economic history of the human race the year 1781 is the most notable date since prehistoric times. In that year two epoch-making events occurred. Colonial America—our country which was to become the world's most efficiently industrialized nation—won its independence; and James Watt began the manufacture and sale of the steam engine, which ushered in the Machine Age.

It is rather ironical that the year which made possible mankind's most enduring POLITICAL democracy should also give birth to the Industrial Revolution, which has brought the most menacing ECONOMIC problems man has ever known.

The discovery of the uses of fire was the most revolutionary and far-reaching series of occurrences in the economic experience of prehistoric man. The discovery of the uses of steam and its successors has proved to be the most revolutionary and far-reaching series of economic occurrences in historic times.

The word "revolution" as applied to the new era in human toil was no exaggeration. The basic struggle in prehistoric times was man versus nature. The basic struggle in the "Machine Age" has been man versus man.

Without question the Machine Age has brought benefits in abundance to mankind. Some of these are:

It has made possible the production of commodities so inexpensively that more people can now enjoy more things.

It has brought about increased trade between individual and individual, and nation and nation, thus building up the wealth of the world.

It has been the stimulus for man's inventive genius to achieve more and more in the "subduing" of nature.

It has provided more leisure and pleasure for society.

It has taken away much that was laborious in the domestic life of both woman and man.

It has provided better things in most cases than could be made by hand.

But along with these benefits, the Industrial Revolution has created for man some of his most difficult economic and social problems. Among the most serious of these are the following:

(1) The invention and use of the machine in industry made possible, especially in its early days, the substitution of the labor of women and children for that of men.

(2) In doing this it dealt the home-life of man a hard blow.

(3) It brought about the concentration of the greater part of the world's growing wealth in the hands of a few.

(4) It made more rigid the great cleavages in society due to occupational distinctions.

(5) It has left many toilers of society impoverished, embittered, and increasingly rebellious.

(6) Unconsciously, it has wrought great havoc with man's outlook upon life, deadening him spiritually into becoming something of an impersonal machine himself.

Church Loyalty Is Emphasized

Church loyalty will be emphasized Sunday in Calvary Evangelical United Brethren church in Circleville and Bethlehem EUB church in Yellowbud.

"A Christian's Love For His Church" is the sermon topic which the Rev. James A. Herbst has chosen for his sermon in the worship services. The sermon is based upon the text taken from the 26th Psalm: "Lord, I love the habitation of thy house, and the place where thy honor dwelleth."

The Period of Moses

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Exodus 14—15; Deuteronomy 5—6; Psalm 136.

After the Israelites had fled from Egypt after the last plague—the slaying of Egyptian firstborn—the Pharaoh and his people asked, "Why have we let Israel go from serving us?" Pharaoh ordered his army to go after them and bring them back.

Camped on the shore of the Red sea, the Israelites saw the Egyptians coming, and upbraided Moses for bringing them from Egypt. The Lord said, "Go forward." Moses raised his hand, the waters of the sea parted, and the people walked through the middle, dryshod.

The hosts of Egypt, intent upon overtaking them, started across the divided waters. Moses, standing on the far shore, again raised his hand, the waters of the sea surged back, and all the great army and their equipment were overcome and destroyed.

After God had thus saved His people, Moses commanded them to be true to Him, to keep His commandments, and to teach their sons and their sons' sons how the Lord their God had brought them safely out of captivity.

MEMORY VERSE—Deuteronomy 6:5.

ANOTHER BURDEN

AMERICANS may be called upon to save more starving victims of war sooner than expected. Probable communist conquests in Asia in the next few months will engulf most of the rice bowl of the world.

More rice is consumed than any other cereal, although it is relatively unimportant as a food in the United States. It is predicted the communists will be in position to condemn 25,000,000 people to starvation by cutting off their rice unless the United States and other wheat producing countries come to their rescue. The United States already has a major problem in 2,000,000 war destitute in Korea.

To meet the need that is expected to arise, the government has already canceled all acreage restrictions in this country. A tremendous burden may be imposed on this country unless Canada, Australia and other countries having wheat surpluses assist. Up to now, under administration policies, the United States has assumed virtually the whole burden of such world relief.

It would be in line with the brutality of communism to condemn millions to death if that suited the revolutionary aim. Americans have always believed in going to the rescue of the destitute. From now on that policy is likely to prove expensive as additional waifs of war are created.

WHY RUSSIA IS STRONG

THE UNITED STATES, from its great bounty, has created a Frankenstein monster which would like nothing better than to destroy its benefactor.

Russia was prostrate at the end of the war, and it was freely predicted that it would require at least 20 years for that nation to become self-supporting. Six years later it is widely regarded as the most powerful nation, militarily, on earth.

To this great strength the United States has been the largest contributor. In lend-lease goods and actual cash Washington has given Russia the equivalent of $15 billion. Contributions continued through the Marshall Plan, and it was not until a few months ago that the State Department attempted to plug Marshall Plan leaks to the Soviet. It is alleged goods being sent to Europe today are being traded to Russia for food.

If World War III eventuates, it will be the first conflict in history in which one nation financed the munitions for both sides.

General MacArthur is out, but General Vaughan is still available in case of emergency.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

An orderly mind cannot recognize anarchy as within the realm of possibility. General Douglas MacArthur once got into a controversy with Kirby Page, editor of "The World Tomorrow," in 1931, about some clergymen refusing to serve in war, resulting in a strong letter in which much of his philosophy of life is stated. I take this letter from Frank Waldrop's "MacArthur On War," a most interesting study of a truly philosophic mind. MacArthur wrote Page:

"The question of war and peace is one that rests, under our form of government, in Congress. In exercising this authority, Congress voices the will of the majority, whose right to rule is the cornerstone upon which our governmental edifice is built. Under the Constitution, its pronouncement on such a question is final, and is obligatory upon every citizen of the United States. That men who wear the cloth of the church should openly defend repudiation of the laws of the land, with the necessary implications arising from such a general attitude toward our statutes, seems almost unbelievable. It will certainly hearten every potential or actual criminal and malefactor who either has or contemplates breaking some other law. Anomalous as it seems, it apparently stamps the clergyman as a leading exponent of law violation at individual pleasure."

Of course, there is nothing new in this doctrine; it is clearly stated in the Constitution of the United States and in a number of decisions of the Supreme Court. Ours is a congressional government; that is, a representative Republic.

During the last 20 years much has been done to shift the center of authority from the Congress to the President, from the legislative to the executive. But the will of the people expresses itself best in the Congress, in the debates, the disagreements, the compromises, the acts of the Congress. A wilful executive can work in secrecy and therefore unrelate himself to the will of the people.

Congress can do no business in secrecy and therefore cannot betray the will of the people without the knowledge of the people. If the people are careless in their vigilance of Congress, that is the fault of the people who neglect their responsibilities and obligations. But the core of our government is the Congress and when that core rots, our nation will fall.

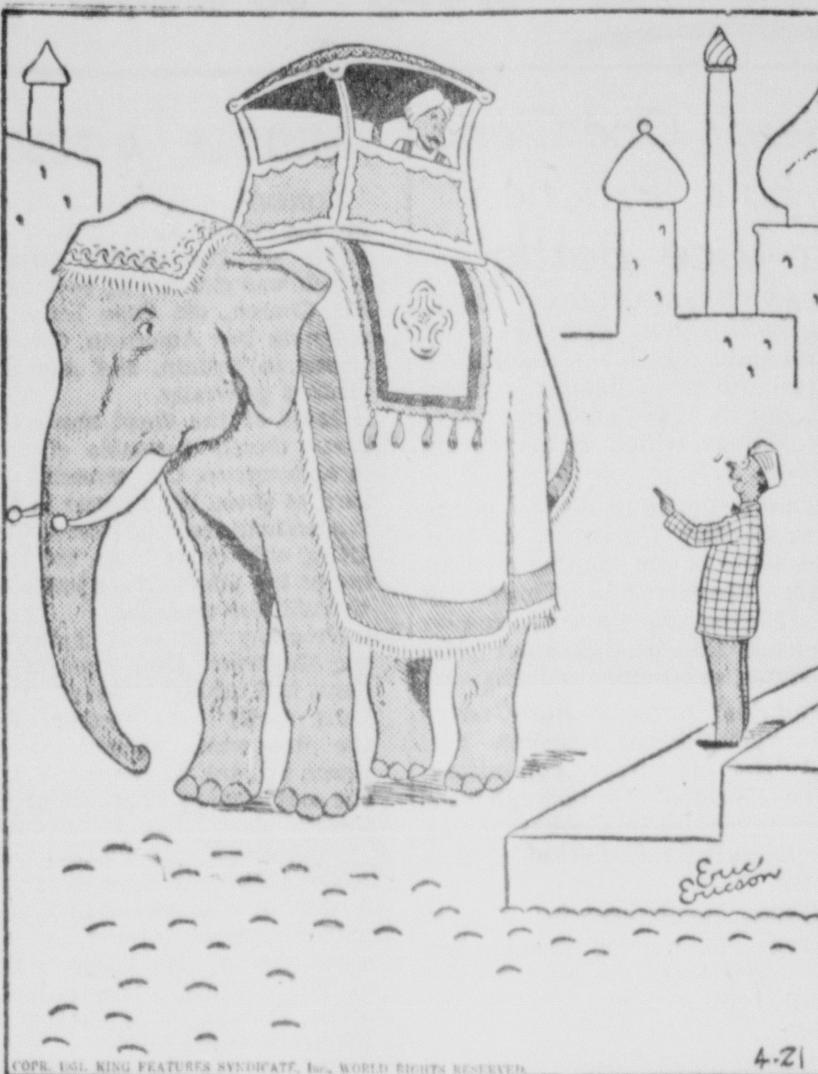

MacArthur, in his magnificent address in 1935 to the Rainbow Division, which he commanded in World War I, said:

"Where are the empires of old? Where is Egypt, once a state on a high plane of civilization where a form of socialism prevailed and where the distribution of wealth was regulated. Where are the empires of the East and the empires of the West which once were the shrines of wealth, wisdom and culture? Where are Babylon, Persia, Carthage, Rome, Byzantium? They fell, never to rise again—annihilated at the hands of a more warlike and aggressive people. Their cultures, memories—their cities, ruins.

A New X-Ray Process That Makes Blood Vessels Visible

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

UNDER ordinary circumstances, blood vessels do not show on X-ray pictures because they are soft tissues. Recently, however, physicians have found a way to make them visible to the X-ray camera, and thus, to the eyes of medical experts, through means of a special contrast dye.

This dye is injected into the vessels and split seconds later X-ray pictures are taken of the areas they serve. This process is known as angiography and it has made possible a number of great strides forward, giving the doctor information heretofore entirely unobtainable.

Study of Diseases

Until now it has been used chiefly in the study of diseases of the heart. It is especially useful in determining the type and severity of defects in children born with congenital heart disease. As a result of these studies, doctors can now more accurately determine whether, in a given case, the type of defect can be remedied by surgical means.

Angiography has also been utilized in the study of tumors, or other disorders affecting the brain. Dye is injected into the large carotid arteries which supply most of the blood to the brain. By means of this dye and subsequent X-ray exposures, the presence of tumors, abscesses, or even hemorrhage in the brain structure can be more accurately determined. Not only can the presence of this defect be determined but its exact location can be visualized. Proper treatment, frequently consisting of surgery, can now be furnished patients with such disease, where heretofore surgery was not possible because the defect could not be located.

Quint took one of her hands. "You may see the day when you'll regret your willfulness in coming, bag and baggage, to me."

"Have you ever regretted running away from Greenlands and the family?"

Quint made no answer to that. He suddenly thought of the possibility of Rhoda's return. What he would say to her, if she came, what she would say to him.

With autumn advancing, fewer came to the tavern to be fed, and Jennet and old Sarah managed the work that had to be done.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
J. S.: What can be done for a contusion? I have a bruise on my thigh which is badly swollen.
Answer: As a general rule, the application of heat will help to reduce the swelling due to a bruise.

Try, Stop Me

"If there is another war," says General Bob Eichelberger, "I recommend that the military, the correspondents, and everyone else concerned, drop the phrase 'mopping up' from their vocabularies. It is not a good enough phrase to die for."

Eichelberger's book, "Our Jungle Road to Tokyo," written in collaboration with Milton Mackaye, is not only a thrill-packed story, but particularly timely today. Here is one of the General's grimmer observations: "I think, insofar as Army officers are concerned that the concept of graceful losing can be overdone; in combat warfare there may be no game next week."

A young secretary who never had attended a symphony concert in her life was given a complimentary ticket for the Philadelphia Orchestra by a salesman seeking a friend at court. She was so anxious to look her best that the concert had gotten under way by the time she arrived. "What are they playing?" she asked an usher. "Beethoven's Eighth Symphony," was the reply. "Oh, dear," sighed the secretary, "am I as late as that?"

CHAPTER FORTY-SEVEN
LATER IN the day Quint spoke to Jennet with considerable concern. "Becky's gone—I doubt you will be content here with no company near your age. I'm poor company, these days. And there's the long winter ahead. You should go east..."

"We are back to that?" Jennet affected to sigh but her eyes were merry. "I am going to stay here, Uncle Quint, where I chose to stay. Unless, of course, you command me to go elsewhere!"

She knew that he knew she would not obey any such command. But he shook his head. "It isn't right—you should be finding a young man for a mate and what chance have you here?"

Jennet flushed deeply. But she did not say, "I am waiting for Peter Brant." She did say, on a mischievous impulse, "There's Errol Piers. He's a hero, now. And he's already done me the honor of asking my hand in marriage. I refused it, of course. His way of courting was far too abrupt for my liking—in truth, it was most comically lacking in finesse!"

"Errol, eh?" Quint gave her a rebuking look. "He may lack finesse but he's a good lad. He was to go on with the enterprise I planned—Dan and I agreed to that. Own the fleet of ships we thought to build, wharves here on the river, the ferry—have a part in making of this settlement a city of industry. That is what Dan and I had in mind for him when we were through."

Jennet had a strong desire to weep, for Quint and his dreams, for Dan, for Errol—for herself.

"I'm sorry, Uncle Quint. I can't marry Errol, even if it'd make you happy... I can't." She added, "Anyway, I think he's gone with Captain Perry."

He hadn't, up to two days ago. He was in the taproom that day. I talked with him. And Perry's off on the lake with his fleet, it's said.

Errol Piers had come to the tavern and hadn't wanted to see her! Well, that was perfectly pleasing to her! Jennet gave a toss of her head.

Quint took one of her hands. "You may see the day when you'll regret your willfulness in coming, bag and baggage, to me."

"Have you ever regretted running away from Greenlands and the family?"

Quint made no answer to that. He suddenly thought of the possibility of Rhoda's return. What he would say to her, if she came, what she would say to him.

With autumn advancing, fewer came to the tavern to be fed, and Jennet and old Sarah managed the work that had to be done.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

The Duchess of Edinburgh—Princess Elizabeth of England—was born on this date; so was Leonard Warren, opera baritone.

On Sunday, April 22: Violinist Yehudi Menuhin, and J. Robert Oppenheimer, physicist, are eligible for felicitations.

IT HAPPENED TODAY

753 B. C.—Rome founded. 1836—Battle of Jacinto, when Texan army, under Sam Houston, routed Mexican army, establishing Texas independence.

On Sunday, April 22: 1451—Birth of Queen Isabella I of Spain, backer of Christopher Columbus. 1889—Part of Oklahoma territory purchased by United States government from Indians and opened to public.

Talk in the taproom when the men of the settlement gathered there was mostly of what they had stored up for the winter. Most at hand, how severe the winter might be. A lot of acorns were dropping—that was a sign of deep snows to come, wasn't it?

But one or another brought in news of the war that was still going on in spite of the naval victory they had celebrated with such zest. They had much to say of an officer named Scott who'd come to Buffalo with his brigade and was whipping them into shape, as no other officer had done before him.

"Drills 'em every goddam day, rain or shine, and whether they feel like it or not!" He took no talk about the right of the militia to refuse to set foot in a foreign country—he'd posted a company of 'em over at the fort, across. Then came a story of a skirmish above Chippewa between these better trained soldiers of Scott's and British regulars, though no one had heard that it had gained any advantage for either side. One week the Gazette reported that the advance on Montreal had been abandoned, but for so long had it been postponed that its failure now meant little to these men sitting in a tavern a long way from Montreal. The frontier here was peaceful enough—with American soldiers holding Fort Erie, and General McClure and his regulars at Fort George, across, on the lower river, they had nothing to worry about.

Quint helped serve them, and sat with them, but a sensitiveness that had been growing in him since his last visit to Buffalo kept him from the most part silent when he was among them, lest some inadvertent word of his might rouse in these neighbors the doubts of his loyalty which those men in Buffalo village held against him. He had a feeling of being under surveillance. It was his practice when the taproom was closed to go to the sheds and assure himself that each was securely locked. Twice he had seen a man's figure with a draw back into the trees. The first time it happened he imagined it, but when, several evenings later, he saw the shadowy figure again, he was convinced someone was loitering about. He could find no sign of any attempt to break into the sheds. Posted there, to watch his coming and going, perhaps. Well, a fruitless duty, a cold one, too, as winter came nearer. But the fact of it made him feel on his guard, even with these men of the settlement.

Early in November, a trader coming up from the lower river brought the news that McClure had retreated from Fort George.

My New York

By MEL REIMER

Mel Reimer

NEW YORK—The other afternoon the New York Convention and Visitors Bureau came up with the proud news that there were 710 conventions and trade exhibits in this town last year, which set a new record for the fifth consecutive year. And, the bureau added, 1951 looks as even bigger year, despite the well-known and loudly-voiced objections of most New Yorkers to these cornball coffee clatches.

In the face of the bureau's statement, I would like to suggest that 1950 was not quite the complete success it could have been. The American Legion didn't convene here.

Matter of fact, the Legion hasn't convened here since 1947, and unless a city has played host to this rampant bunch of fun-loving Rover boys, it can't be considered to have had such a spectacular convention year.

Some of you may remember 1947. There were more than 50,000 Legionnaires loose in Manhattan during that fabulous August holiday. It was—how do the Chinese say it?—the Year of the Water Pistol. Ten years before the boys had held their convention here and the unofficial emblem was a bulb-topped squawking cane, but in '47 every Legionnaire and his wife was armed with a water pistol.

There were various reactions to this. Times Square was the bulkhead, and in and around its environs, the battle was joined nightly. There was some intramural warfare, say, between the Californians and the Kansans, but mainly the fight was waged against the innocent bystander.

If the Legionnaires meant to get a rise out of New Yorkers, they were disappointed, although a couple of them were slugged silly by cold-eyed Broadwayites who didn't appreciate the juvenalia.

A MANHATTAN TOY DISTRIBUTOR ESTIMATED that more than $400,000 was spent on water pistols during those few days. They generally replaced the bags full of water dropped from hotel rooms, an old Legion custom (and one, incidentally, that will be observed as usual this spring at Columbia university during the amiable spring riots).

There was one instance of New York striking back. Two Buffalo delegates were standing outside the Hotel Pennsylvania—now the Statler—and spraying water on passing girls... when a Sanitation department truck bore down, skirted close to the curb, and cut loose with its powerful sprays. The boys from Buffalo never knew what hit them.

Meyer Berger wrote wistfully that "there is something mighty pathetic about a little band of one-time warriors defying Father Time with water pistols," but a middle-aged western delegate's wife philosophized by saying "We got in our licks, and we might as well face it. We're getting over the hilltop now."

I like to remember, too, the chambermaid in the Park Central hotel—now the Park Sheraton (some of the local hotels have kept their names, honest)—who came out of one room, trembling and shaking, one morning.

"There's eight or 10 men on the floor in there," she told a co-worker. "I think they're all dead." It developed they were only half-dead. At noon, one of them arose from his shrouds and ordered bromos for all.

IN THE FINAL ESTIMATE, it is the hotel men who bear the brunt of a convention's impact, and some of the local innkeepers were pretty bitter after the Legion folded its barracks tents in 1947.

One manager said his hotel stood to lose about $20,000 as a result of "rowdism, vulgarity and vandalism" and another reported that more than 2,000 liquor bottles had been thrown out of the windows of his hotel into a court. The ordinary damage consisted of broken chairs and lamps, stolen trash baskets, torn or lost towels and linens, cigar burns, etc.

If you are a parade man, however, the '47 convention was your dish of tea. Two million New Yorkers lined Fifth avenue that year for the parade, and it lasted 12 hours, from 9:30 a. m. to shortly after 9:30 p. m.

The boys were on their dignity for this one, and the hi-jinks were almost forgotten; only 123 persons were given first-aid treatment along the line of march. It was one of the year's two most impressive parades, the other of course being the St. Patrick's Day march, which is beyond compare every year.

So, summing up, I would like to suggest that as far as conventions went last year, we had all the preliminary games, but the World Series went elsewhere.

I would not, however, like this to be construed as a plea to the Legion to return. I am a tired old man, and after having gone through Bull Run, Shiloh, Verdun and Iwo Jima, I am in no shape to fight my way through a Legion convention again.

Reading For Guidance Stressed By Mrs. Crites In Talk To Harper Class

New Officers Are Elected

Mrs. E. O. Crites stressed obtaining good books and reading for inspirational guidance in her talk before the Harper Bible Class annual dinner meeting held Friday evening in First Evangelical United Brethren church service center.

She listed a number of books, briefly discussing many of them and pointing out that they were in the public library, available for the asking.

The list of books and authors she recommended included writings of well-known writers "whose words are regarded as personal messages of inspiration and faith to many famous Americans."

Mrs. Crites listed the Bible as "the world's greatest text book" and suggested the following as "supplementary reading": "Guideposts," "New Guideposts" and "A Guide to Confident Living" by Peale; "The Art of Real Happiness" and "Faith Is the Answer" by Peale and Blanton; "Mr. Jones Meets the Master" and "Faith Is Power for You" by Daniel Poling and "Abundant Living" and "The Way to Power and Peace" by E. Stanley Jones.

The speaker also recommended, "Create Your Own Tomorrow" by Mary Blair Johnson; "What Would Jesus Do?" by Glen Clark; "Prayer, the Mightiest Force in the World" by Frank Laubach and "The Greatest Story Ever Told" and "Why I Know There Is a God" by Fulton Oursler.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira Valentine and Mr. and Mrs. George Gerhardt were in charge of arrangements for the dinner and program which was attended by approximately 40 members and guests, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Seymour and Mr. and Mrs. Mack Noggle.

Election of new class officers was held with George Gerhardt elected to serve as president. Other officers chosen were, Mrs. Montford Kirkwood Jr., vice-president; Alvin Perdon, secretary; Ralph Benington, treasurer; Montford Kirkwood, teacher and Polly Thomas, pianist.

Call attention to a lovely sofa by hanging framed pictures over it. One effective arrangement might be a large square picture, flanked on either side by two small oval prints, hung one above the other.

Local Women's Club Plays Role In State Project

"Circleville Junior Woman's Club, along with 94 other junior clubs in the Ohio Federation of Women's Clubs, is participating in a statewide project, Aid to American Indians, during the current club year," according to Mrs. Sterling Poling, junior chairman of Indian affairs for the Ohio Federation.

"Locally the club has sent layettes to Indians on the Navajo reservation at Window Rock, Ariz., and has contributed money to sponsor an orphaned or abandoned Navajo child through the Save the Children Federation. Many children will attend school for the first time through the efforts of junior clubs and other groups such as the local organization," she said.

According to the junior chairman, other Indian projects carried by clubs throughout the state include Christmas gifts, school supplies, used clothing, "out of school kits" and contributions of money for scholarships, eye-glasses and treatment of crippled children.

Mrs. Poling said that "most junior clubs in the Ohio Federation are civic groups, such as the Circleville club, and are interested in solving local problems, but we are not entirely 'isolationistic' in our activities because we do such things as aiding Indians and sending postage stamps for wounded veterans."

Fashion Flash

HONOLULU, April 21—Hawaii is proving today that forgotten fashions can become modern modes.

On Waikiki Beach ingenious designers are turning Jap obis sashes into cocktail frocks and lounging robes for hosting and hosting.

One Honolulu - Japanese couturier started the trend in 1946 by rummaging through hand-down ceremonial robes in storage. Deciding an original Oriental touch might bring importance to Hawaii fashion prestige, she ripped seams and fashioned oldtime obis into new slim styles.

The custom designer makes $250 and up for garments from leftovers, distinguished only by workmanship characteristics and precommercial fabric manufactures.

U. S. women may find Grandma's remnants equally modish and manipulatable.

Hawaiian men, native - bred and adopted, have an instinct for turning feathers into fashions.

You can recognize a wealthy Kamaaina (Kah-mah-ay - nah), old-timer, by the feather ties, hat-bands or belts he wears.

Even to the Hawaiians themselves, feather accessories—made from pheasant necks and breasts—cost from $75 to $1,000 apiece, depending on their antiquity and workmanship. There are only a few feather craftsmen left in the islands and they make each tie or hatband with tedious care.

Each single feather is hand-sewn to a cloth strip. It takes plenty of time.

To add to the burden and cost of feather clothes-making, Hawaii gaming legislators have chopped the pheasant hunting season to three months a year, and the limit on quarry to three birds a day.

"Museum modes" are the latest innovation by Honolulu's custom designers.

They are specializing in archaic fabrics for 1951, making dresses, coats and lingerie from ancient silks that the Chinese used to use for lanterns, coat-linings and tapestries in the 18th Century.

The lush fabrics, all hand woven and intricately embroidered, were called "tribute cloths" because, they were the gifts underlings slaves to fashion and then presented to royalty as tributes.

They resemble in an extravagant way the finest silk screen prints American fabric manufacturers are currently turning out for moderate-priced mainland cocktail and dinner gowns.

An attractive color scheme that goes well with wheat-colored modern furniture might be deep green or burgundy walls with a brown rug. Upholstery and curtains could combine green and yellow or burgundy and yellow.

"WILLIE AND JOE," those fabulous cartoon characters of World War II, capture the high-hearted humor of fighting men in Bill Mauldin's "Up Front," presentation starring Tom Ewell, right, as "Willie" and David Wayne as "Joe." It starts Sunday at the Grand theatre.

GLENN FORD, RHONDA FLEMING and Edmond O'Brien respectively portray a rugged cowpoke, a mysterious redhead and a quick-thinking secret agent in "The Redhead and The Cowboy," starting Sunday at the Cliftona theatre.

A SMALL BANNER IS HUGE IN HEARTS OF AMERICANS

By HENRY C. NICHOLAS
Central Press Correspondent

AS A RESULT of the Korean War the service flag is beginning to appear in the windows and on the walls of organizations throughout the nation. It is a small banner with one or more stars denoting men and women in the armed services of the country.

The service flag is distinctly an American memorial. Like the nation-wide celebration of Thanksgiving Day it reveals to the world that the heart and strength of this great country lies not in its great buildings and industrial structures, but deep in the homes of its people.

The first service flag appeared 34 years ago in the home of Capt. Robert L. Queisser in Cleveland, during World War I. The story is that Captain Queisser had served on the Mexican border with the Fifth Ohio Infantry from 1914 to 1916. As a result of an injury he was placed on the retired list of officers of the Ohio National Guard.

WHEN THIS country entered World War I in 1917, Queisser vividly remembered his war experiences when two of his sons were among the first to enlist in the armed services.

"When war was declared with Germany in 1917," said Capt. Queisser, "I wondered if I could not create some design by which it might be known that my two sons were away in their country's service. I wanted it to be there to greet them on their return, like a candle in the window. I wanted it to be a visible sign to their mother of the sacrifices her sons were making, and a comfort to all other mothers whose sons and daughters were away in the services."

Captain Queisser promptly started to work and after a few experiments designed the service flag we know today. It was adopted formally by the city of Cleveland and the idea spread rapidly throughout the country. The first of these flags were hand-made in the home. Manufacturers, however, soon began producing them in large numbers and they could be purchased in stores everywhere.

One of the World War II mothers who was proud of her service stars for five sons was Mrs. Frank McCabe of Naperville, Ill.

duced in Congress to proclaim the service flag an official flag of the Government, but none was adopted. The first national recognition was in May, 1918, when Brig. Gen. Nathan William MacChesney declared the service flag had "taken such firm root in popular sentiment and has been of such beneficial influence that it is officially recognized, and everyone who is entitled to fly it is encouraged and urged to do so."

DURING WORLD WAR II the service flag proved even more popular than it did in the first world war. While there is no record of the number of flags displayed the quantity manufactured would indicate the number ran into the millions.

In October, 1942, Congress finally passed a resolution which authorized the secretary of war to approve an official design for the service flag, and license manufacturers to make them. The design finally approved was quite similar to that selected by Captain Queisser, a rectangle banner with a white background, a red border, with a blue star for each person in the service. In addition, a smaller gold star was approved to be placed over the blue star if the person in service is killed.

No other nation possesses any similar memorial, displayed only during times of war.

Hostilities seldom arise after people discover that they get more benefits through co-operation. Most party line users long ago learned that everybody wins by sharing the line fairly, keeping conversations short and well-spaced, respecting privacy, and giving up the line promptly in an emergency. Company and users alike appreciate the greater efficiency that results from this customary spirit of give and take. Thank you.

NOT MUCH WAS EXPECTED

Special Award Is Urged For Old Casey Stengel

NEW YORK, April 21—Some observers are pushing a suggestion for a brand new award from the Baseball Writers Association.

This one would be called "The Award-To-The-Man-who-Accomplished-So-Much-When-So-Little-Was-Expected."

The baseball writers, like the boxing writers and track writers, dote upon plastering various successful people with what might be called the laurel wreath.

The award suggested should go to Casey Stengel.

Stengel was a notorious failure as a baseball manager until he came to the Yankees. Once upon this verdant scene he became a consistent winner to the point where fans wonder why he ever wound up managing back in the minors in the first place.

That's where the Yankees got him from, out on the coast league, to succeed Bucky Harris, who won a pennant with the Yankees in 1947 and barely missed in 1948.

HARRIS WAS promptly fired for this reason or that one and Stengel was brought upon the scene from exile.

He can't lose for winning. Stengel has won two pennants for two seasons which is far beyond anything he ever dreamed of considering where he toiled in the baseball vineyards before.

Stengel came to the Yankees

62 Are Signed For This Year's Little Brown Jug

DELAWARE, April 21—Officials of the Delaware County Fair Grand Circuit harness races announced today that 62 of the top three-year-old Standardbreds of the nation are entered in the Little Brown Jug, the Kentucky Derby of harness racing.

Joe Neville, speed committee chairman, said the jug will be run Sept. 20 for a purse of approximately $75,000. The half-mile race will be the major attraction of the four-day Grand Circuit meet which begins Sept. 18.

The card will consist of 12 stakes and four overnight events. The second big attraction of the sidewheelers' carnival is the Old Oaken Bucket, a $5,000 three-year-old trot which will be run on the preceding Wednesday.

This one draws many of the colts which raced in the Hambletonian.

Sportsmanship Panel Urging Attitude Change

DETROIT, April 21—The advisory committee for the Babe Ruth Sportsmanship program has voiced its protest against the "win-at-any-cost" attitude and the subsidization of sports.

Announcement of the committee, which comprises forty leading sports editors and writers, was made in Detroit at the 56th annual convention of the American Association for Health, Physical Education and Recreation. Included among the sports writers, who have just completed the formation of the advisory committee, are the presidents of the Football Writers Association and the Baseball Writers Association, representatives from the worldwide news services, feature syndicates and newspapers across the nation.

They were unanimous in their feeling that something must be done to emphasize the principles of good sportsmanship—principles which they said have suffered greatly by recent disclosures concerning paid amateur athletes and the basketball scandals.

Ex-OSU Back Freed Of Rap

COLUMBUS, April 21—William Peterson, former Ohio State university quarterback now serving with the Air Force's 166th Fighter Squadron at Lockbourne Air Base, is free today of a charge of being absent without leave.

Peterson was to have faced a court-martial for failure to report for duty with the squadron when it entered federal active duty Feb. 1 from Air National Guard status.

Orders dropping the AWOL charges, however, came from Baer Field, Ft. Wayne, where he was slated to stand trial.

Sports Seen Bringing Harm To Delinquents

CHICAGO, April 21—A University of Chicago psychiatrist specialist claimed today that competitive sports may do a juvenile delinquent more harm than good.

Dr. Bruno Bettelheim discredited the popular belief that organized recreation is a sure-fire treatment in the rehabilitation of an offender. He stated that such aggressive activities as sports create new frustrations and often counter-aggressions. He explained: "Only one group or one individual can win in competitive athletics. The victor builds up his self-esteem by winning and this may help combat his delinquent tendencies."

"What is overlooked is that sports may be very detrimental to the loser."

Dr. Bettelheim said that on the surface it seemed like a sound idea to combat delinquency by providing exciting activities for the delinquent. But he added:

"UNFORTUNATELY, there are hardly any activities as exciting for the delinquent as his delinquency."

Dr. Bettelheim said many criminals have "never learned to postpone getting what they want."

This may have been the trouble, he added, with the New York college basketball players who were involved in the recent bribery scandal.

Many of them ranked among the best college performers in the nation and attractive professional basketball offers awaited them, but they accepted money to "fix" or "control the margin of victory" in their games.

Dr. Bettelheim recommended that delinquents be taught to live without excitement and to enjoy calmer, more peaceful and unexciting ways of life.

Swimming Brings No Ills, Claims Florida Medic

DETROIT, April 21—The old belief that swimming leads to colds and other respiratory ills has been declared a "phony" by Dr. Wesley M. Staton of the University of Florida.

Dr. Staton disclosed his theory to a convention of teachers at the American Association for Health, Physical Education and Recreation, which ended its 56th annual convention here yesterday.

He said he made a 60-day study of two comparable groups of students at the University of Florida, the only difference between the two groups being that one group swam regularly and the other not at all.

During the period, Dr. Staton said, there was practically no difference in either group in the number who caught colds or developed ear, nose, throat or sinus infections.

Battlefield Out Of Big Derby

NEW YORK, April 21—The Kentucky Derby will be run without one of its top Winter favorites.

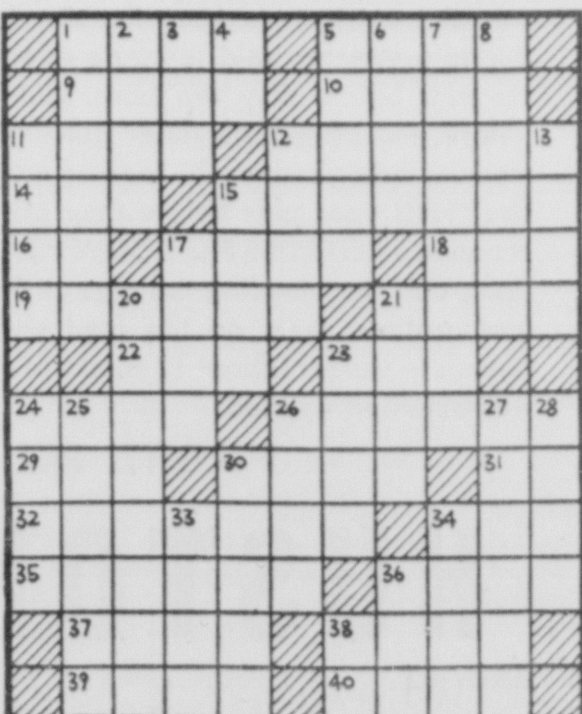

Battlefield, one of the foremost candidates for three-year-old honors, was withdrawn from the race yesterday by his owner, George D. Widener.

The Widener Stable thus kept its policy of never having entered a horse in the Kentucky classic. Trainer Bert Mulholland said the colt has not trained satisfactorily.

Athletics Crack Old Bosox Jinx

Befuddled Bostons Defeated, 6-3

NEW YORK, April 21—Jimmy Dykes already has accomplished one thing that Connie Mack, the old master, wasn't able to do in his last two seasons as manager of the Philadelphia Athletics.

The A's lost 22 straight games in Boston's Fenway Park between Sept. 12, 1948, and yesterday. Then the "new" Athletics, guided by the rotund Dykes, rose up to defeat the befuddled Red Sox, 6 to 3, and rout their most infamous jinx.

Philadelphia put another dragon to flight, too, by defeating Red Sox Ace Mel Parnell after losing ten straight to the elegant southpaw. The A's did it on four hit pitching by Lefty Alex Kellner, although portenders have been notoriously ineffective against the Beantowners.

This unseemly turn of events—before only 11,461 opening game fans—emphasized the peculiar plight of the Sox, who now have lost three straight games and have displayed almost no power in the process.

BOSTON'S VAUNTED murderer's row finally mustered its first homerun of the season—by Lou Boudreau.

The world champion New York Yankees, who won two in a row from the Red Sox earlier in the week, fared less well in Washington. With 27,331 fans looking on for the delayed opener, the Senators' Sandalia Consuegra took the first game of an afternoon doubleheader, 5 to 3.

The Senators got only two hits themselves, but five Yankee pitchers contributed 13 walks.

President Truman threw out the first ball and drew a sprinkling of jeers when he entered and left the park.

It was the first time in many years that a President had been booed in Griffith Stadium. Last time was when ex-President Herbert Hoover received the old Bronx Cheer during the Prohibition era. Then, the boos were accompanied by the cry: "We want beer!"

In the night game, the Senators won again, 8 to 4, routing Rookie Tom Morgan in the sixth. Only bright spot for the Yanks was Jackie Jensen's two-run homer off Lou Sima in the ninth.

The Chicago White Sox and Cleveland Indians also remained undefeated in the American League standings, each winning its third straight game.

Chicago's Randy Gumpert shut out the toothless Detroit Tigers, 5 to 0, with only three hits. Hank Arft's ninth-inning homerun robbed Bob Feller of a shut-out as the Indians topped the St. Louis Browns, 4 to 1.

FELLER ALLOWED five hits in Cleveland's home opener before 48,316 fans.

The National League Champion Philadelphia Phillies fell victim of a two-hitter by Max Surkont as the Boston Braves edged the Phils' luckless Ken Heintzelman, 2 to 1.

Brooklyn's Don Newcombe tested his aching arm and pitched a 7-to-3 win over the New York Giants, allowing only five hits.

The St. Louis Cardinals handed the Chicago Cubs their first defeat, 5 to 1, in a night game as Gerry Staley scattered nine hits and Joe Garagiola blasted a homer.

Revenue Mortgage Bonds OK'd To Finance New City Sewer

20 Pct. Hike In Rates Is Possible

Officials Study Requirements

Circleville city officials have learned it would be legal to pay part of the cost of a new sanitary sewer to drain the extreme north end by issuing sewage revenue mortgage bonds.

But it would mean a possible 20 percent hike in local sewerage rates, according to City Solicitor George Gerhardt.

The solicitor explained that present mortgage revenue figures were examined by representatives of a Cincinnati bonding firm who reported them insufficient to pay off bonds for the new sewer line.

"The 20 percent increase is strictly a guess figure," Gerhardt said. "There are other factors that could influence it. For instance, there are residents in Circleville who are not served at present by existing sewer lines, but who could be. If these persons were added as customers, there would be a corresponding revenue increase."

IT HAS BEEN estimated that the cost of the new sewer line would be about $60,000.

City council has long been considering ways and means to install a new sewer.

Among plans considered is one to run a line parallel to the Norfolk and Western Railway to tap into a large line at Main street. This would relieve sewage problems east and west of North Court street, and, in addition, ease the load on the large North Court street main.

The fact that issuance of mortgage revenue bonds would probably necessitate an increase in sewerage rates was predicted earlier by Sewage Department Manager Ervin Leist.

He has pointed out that "right now we are spending just about what our annual revenue is."

Leist added that he doubted if new sewer lines could be installed to service areas where none exist at present under the mortgage revenue bonds.

But the main expense of installing the line paralleling the N and W tracks could be handled by issuing bonds, he said.

GERHARDT QUOTED the bonding firm representative as saying Circleville is one of the very few cities in the state in which sewerage rates are not based on the amount of water consumed.

"The main thing we got from their visit," Gerhardt added, "was the information that it would be legal to issue mortgage revenue bonds to install the new sewer."

He said issuing the bonds probably would meet with more public approval than the alternative method of raising funds by taxation.

Schuman Says UN Holds Answer

PARIS, April 21—French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman declared today that "limitation of the Korean conflict to Korean territory is a political decision of the United Nations."

Schuman emphasized that "it repeatedly has made clear that extension beyond Korean territory is a political question belonging to the United Nations."

Newark Jury Still Probing

NEWARK, April 21 — The Licking County grand jury, which spent six of eight days in session investigating gambling and vice charges in Newark and Licking County, recessed today until next week.

Judge Charles B. Holtsberry said today the jury probably will report either Monday or Tuesday.

Two witnesses which appeared before the jury recessed today were Ralph B. Hunter, retired police captain, and Raymond Devereaux of the Park National Bank.

MacArthur Seen With Future As Elder Statesman

WASHINGTON, April 21—Gen. Douglas MacArthur may have closed his military career, but only to emerge today as MacArthur, the elder statesman and fearless critic.

The "Hero of Bataan" left eyes moist when he told the joint meeting of Congress that "I now close my military career and just fade away—an old soldier who tried to do his duty as God gave him the light to see that duty."

MacArthur thus wrote an end to his 52 years of military service.

But from the same brilliant rhetoric which alternately swayed Congress from death-like stillness to wildly cheering applause, the MacArthur of the future seemed to emerge.

From now on he will be doing some fighting of a kind not as familiar to him as bombs, beachheads and gunfire.

The general has no intention of retiring from the fight into which his views on Far Eastern policies have led him.

Nor has he any intention of hanging up his uniform in the foreseeable future.

Under the congressional act which established MacArthur's five-star rank, he is never actually retired from active duty and can wear full uniform—or not—wherever and whenever he so desires, even though he does not have a designated command.

HE IS SUBJECT to recall to such a command whenever the President or the Department of Defense so order.

MacArthur retains the title "General of the Army" until his death. His $1,563.42 monthly salary is broken down as follows: $954.75, base pay; $42, subsistence; $150, rental allowance, and $416.67, personal money allowance. The annual total is $18,761.04.

Similarly, the dismissed Pacific command is entitled to the lifetime services of a small official military family which it is assumed he will require in what many believe are his most active days ahead.

Warning Given Merchants On OPS Regulation

A warning to retail merchants that they have only a few days to file the proper forms under Office of Price Stabilization regulations was issued Saturday in Columbus by District Director Edward F. Wagner.

The deadline for filing form five under regulations 15 and 16 is April 28.

The forms for merchants are available in the offices of the local Chamber of Commerce.

When properly filled out, form five shows in which of four classes the individual grocer falls. The classes are determined by the volume of business done by the grocer.

Wagner urged grocers to request regulations and forms. He said:

"Time is running out and we want to do everything possible to see that grocers obtain the regulations and required forms. This is not possible unless we have the cooperation of the individual grocer."

The regulation also requires that all retail food dealers post signs informing the customers of the classification group into which the stores fall.

Some Slaughter Houses Ignore OPS Registration

Several slaughterers have failed to register as required under Office of Price Stabilization Distribution Order 1, Sydney A. Hesse, regional director of Columbus, has announced.

Registrations were due by April 15, Hesse added. Under the provisions of the order unregistered slaughterers are not permitted to remain in business.

"Those who have no registered through ignorance of the order are free to call upon us for help," Hesse said.

"We will make every effort to keep these slaughterers in business as long as they show good faith and try to comply with the regulations."

Retailers buying meat from slaughterers who they know are not registered should advise such slaughterers to register, he said, adding that such retailers' meat supply would undoubtedly be cut off if their slaughterers are forced out of business.

Hesse said the regional office is making every effort to list unregistered slaughterers, using files furnished by state agricultural offices for the purpose.

Belgrade Hears Albanian Unrest

BELGRADE, April 21—Yugoslav foreign sources reported today that the Albanian regime of Premier Enver Hoxha is under continuing attacks by anti-government guerrillas aided by armed parachutists dropped inside the country last February.

Accounts reaching Belgrade said the bark of anti-aircraft guns and the throb of aircraft, possibly bearing reinforcements, have again awakened Tirana citizens in recent nights.

Retail Sales In This County Show Increase

A weekly report of sales tax stamps sold in Pickaway County shows an increase in business during the week ending April 7 over the corresponding week last year.

State Treasurer Roger W. Tracy reported a total of $5,306.74 collected in sales tax receipts during the first week in April, compared to $4,205.44 for the same week in 1950, a gain of $1,101.30.

For the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1950, up to April 7 sales tax collections totaled $223,745.63, compared to $193,624.84 for last year, a hike of $30,120.79.

Throughout the state gross sales of the stamps shown by industry classification showed gains in all classes by clothing and chain stores.

Clothing sales dropped to $137,819.78 from last year's $208,179.68, while chain stores dropped from $583,854.94 to $517,409.27.

In counties neighboring Pickaway receipts for the week ending April 7, compared to the

Historians Seek Background For Old Army Ballad

"Old Soldiers never die, They just fade away."

Those two lines became the center of controversy as historians sought to trace the source of the Army ballad quoted Thursday by Gen. Douglas MacArthur to Congress.

Military Academy historians at West Point said that MacArthur's phrase "old soldiers never die—they just fade away" may date back a century to an old hymn.

A march entitled "Old Soldiers Never Die" and bearing the same line was copyrighted in 1931 by Carl Fisher, Inc., music publishers of New York. The composer was Charles R. Campbell.

It contains this refrain: "Old soldiers never die, They just fade away. Old soldiers never die, They just fade away."

Then it continues: "Young soldiers wish they would, Wish they would, wish they would, 'Young soldiers wish they would, 'Wish they'd fade away."

West Point historians point out this song was published long after MacArthur's graduation in 1903.

Lt. Col. James B. Leer, the academy's public information officer, said the song may have been based on a British soldier's ballad of World War I.

The ballad in turn, may have been a parody on the hymn composed in 1885 and titled "Kind Words Can Never Die."

The version offered by MacArthur differs slightly with what is believed to be the original British song. The general said "just fades," the ballad says "simply fades."
